H. He went in early life to North Bridgewater, Mass., and entered the employment of the firm of Howard & Clark, manufacturers of furniture, first as boy in the factory, then as a journeyman, and finally he became a member of the firm. He was noted for his pleasant, genial manners. His business was not confined to furniture alone, for as his business prospered he invested largely in real estate and owned many houses. He was generally regarded as a sharp business man, yet many a tenant lived in his house long without paying rent. He was one of the kindest and most considerate of landlords, and scores have been indebted to him for a home. When he came to North Bridgewater it was a new town of less than two hundred inhabitants. He lived to see it grow into the flourishing city of Brockton, with more than 33,000 inhabitants, and he could say that he had done more than the average citizen to bring about this change. He did not care for political position, but he was a member of the board of health for eleven years. For the last few years of his life he did but little business except to care for his large property. He was an earnest member of the New Jerusalem church, and contributed liberally to its support.

- iii. Harriet McEwen<sup>9</sup>, b. Nov. 2, 1834. She has always lived in the old homestead where she was born. As a child she was not strong and was therefore chiefly educated at home by her mother, who was a lady of unusual attainments. Her father was a gentleman of the old school, a man of great refinement of thought and feeling, and of strong musical tastes, being one of the leaders in the Handel and Haydn society. In the midst of these surroundings the practical and poetical nature of the daughter was developed. She is a thorough house-keeper, but she has found the time to devote to good works in the church, which she ardently loves. She has taken great interest in the Cottage hospital of her native city, and in recognition of her services the directors on July 1, 1895, voted, "That the western wing of the new building be named the 'Harriet McEwen Kimball Pavilion,' as a slight recognition of her faithful and untiring labors in behalf of the institution from its first inception." Literature has been her pastime rather than her regular work, and she has therefore been able to devote her best energies to whatever has come from her pen. She has published three volumes of poems. In 1889 a full and complete edition of these was published which was very favorably noticed by the London Athenaeum. Dr. A. P. Peabody, Bishop Huntingdon, Mr. Stedman, and others have assigned her a high position among the writers of devotional poetry. She is an exceedingly interesting person. She has avoided as far as possible any publicity, but in her church and neighborhood she is known and valued for her unselfish devotion to the interests of suffering humanity, and she has many warm friends.

musical instruction in the public schools of Manchester, and many of the leading singers of the city were numbered among his private pupils. His work in the schools was successful in the highest degree, and hundreds are indebted to him for all they ever learned of music. His rare ability as a musical director was demonstrated in May, 1895, at the opening concert of the Philharmonic Society, when the public had the opportunity of listening to the excellent work of a chorus of six hundred voices from the higher grades of the Manchester schools under his leadership. Throughout New Hampshire and adjoining states he was well known as a soloist, and he is still remembered in Boston for the prominent part he took in the famous concerts of the Handel and Haydn society. His death occurred suddenly at his home on the evening of Sept. 27, 1895. There had been a rehearsal of the Unitarian choir, of which he was a member and leader, and after the singers had gone home, he was playing on an old Cremona violin which his brother had brought from Washington, and Mrs. C. E. Burnham was accompanying him on the piano. They had reached the last bar of the selection, Raff's Cavatina, which he played with the most beautiful expression, when he suddenly made a discord. Without looking up, the accompanist said: "Don't stop!" But it was Death's hand that made the discord, and the player, falling to the floor, expired before the echoes of his music had died away. Death was due to heart disease, from which deceased had suffered his first attack a few days previously. Possessed of a social, genial temperament, he had the faculty of making friends and holding them, and his memory is cherished in loving regard by thousands, young and old. He was a member of the Masonic Order, thirty-second degree, Scottish Rite, of DeMolay Commandery, K. T., of Boston, and of the Mystic Shrine. No children.

to remain there. He practised law for some years with success, his ability being recognized in that vicinity. About 1851 or 1852 he was afflicted with bronchitis, and acting upon the advice of his physicians gave up his profession. He then devoted himself to developing the Jackson iron mine near Marquette, Mich., in which he had an interest. He lived a few years at Detroit, then two years at Erie, Pa., and finally in 1858 made his headquarters at Cleveland, Ohio. He was president of the Jackson mine for several years, and invested largely in smelting furnaces near Youngstown, Ohio, and in the Mahoning Valley. In 1863 he was injured in a railway collision, from the effects of which he never fully recovered. He left at his death a large estate. He was a man of scholarly attainments, devoted to scientific research, quiet in manner, resolute of purpose, of unswerving integrity; a man who won universal respect; his friends, though not numerous for one so widely known, when once made were held by the beauty, strength, and purity of his character. His wife and family remained at the homestead in Cleveland after his death. She was a woman full of energy and enthusiasm, which kept her young in heart and spirit in spite of the weight of years. She was one of the foremost promoters of art in the city, giving liberally of her wealth to this and other semi-public interests. She was the founder of the Western Reserve School of Design. In founding this she carried out the idea of her husband, whose wish it was to found a school where young women could become self supporting through the applied arts. She was a woman of strong personality, so attractive in appearance, and so full of sympathy and cheerful helpfulness, that few were more widely known or more beloved in the city where she made her home.

1584 James Putnam Kimball<sup>8</sup> (James<sup>7</sup>, James<sup>6</sup>, Nathaniel<sup>5</sup>, Thomas<sup>4</sup>, Ephraim<sup>3</sup>, Richard<sup>2</sup>, Richard<sup>1</sup>) born in Salem, Mass., April 22, 1836; married July 22, 1874, Mary E. Farley, born Chelsea, Mass., July 30, 1851, died Washington, D. C., May 25, 1886, daughter of Gustavus and Amelia Frederika (Newman) Farley of Cambridge, Mass. He was graduated at the Salem High School in 1854, and immediately entered the Lawrence Scientific School of Harvard University, where he spent a year. He then went to Germany and continued his studies. Several months were spent in Gottingen, after which he matriculated at the University of Frederick Wilhelm at Berlin, where he remained until 1857. He received the degrees of A. M. and Ph. D. from the University of George Augusta. He then entered on a practical course in mining engineering and metallurgy. The summer of 1858 was spent in Paris. In 1859 and 1860 he was employed as assistant on the geological survey of the upper Mississippi lead region, in parts of Wisconsin and Illinois. In 1865 he was professor of chemistry and economic geology in the State Agricultural College at Ovid, N. Y., and was engaged there when the war broke out. The president of the college, Gen. Mariesna R. Patrick, a military man by education and experience, took the field as brigadier general. Dr. Kimball joined him at Upton Hill, Va., April 2, 1862, and received a commission from President Lincoln dated April 18, 1862, as assistant adjutant-general of volunteers. As chief of brigade staff he participated in numerous battles, including those of Gainesville, Groveton, Chantilly, South Mountain, and Antietam. After the latter battle Gen. Patrick was appointed provost marshal general "of the armies operating against Richmond," and Capt. Kimball was transferred with the general officer to the staff of the commanding general. He served on the staffs of Generals McClellan, Burnside, Hooker, and Meade, and took part in the battles of Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, and Gettysburg. Suffering from ill health he resigned his commission in Dec., 1863. On March 23, 1865, the rank of major was conferred upon him "for gallant and meritorious services." He resumed the practice of his profession in New York city. In 1874 he accepted an honorary chair in geology in Lehigh University at South Bethlehem, Pa., while continuing his professional work in New York city. For twelve years he resided at Lehigh University. On Jan. 28, 1886, President Cleveland appointed him director of the mint of the United States, a position that he held for over four years and resigned Oct. 15, 1889. He has resided since in Washington, D. C. He is the author of numerous scientific memoirs in the American Journal of Science, in the proceedings of the American Institute of Mining Engineers, and other scientific periodicals. He is connected with various scientific societies in the United States and in Europe.

1587 Sumner Increase Kimball<sup>8</sup> (Increase S.<sup>7</sup>, Nathaniel<sup>6</sup>, Richard<sup>6</sup>, Ezra<sup>4</sup>, Ephraim<sup>2</sup>, Richard<sup>2</sup>, Richard<sup>1</sup>) born in Lebanon, Me., Sept. 2, 1834; married Oct. 12, 1858, Ellen Frothingham Fenno, born Dec. 5, 1835, daughter of Edward and Elizabeth (Frothingham) Fenno of Augusta, Me. He was graduated A. B., Dartmouth, 1855, S. D., Bowdoin, 1891. He studied law with his father, was admitted to the bar in 1858, and began practice at North Berwick, Me. In 1859 he sat in the legislature, and, though the youngest member, took an active part in the proceedings, serving on the committee on the judiciary. In January, 1861, he entered the treasury department at Washington as a clerk. He rose to the position of chief clerk in the second auditor's office. In 1871 he was placed in charge of the revenue marine service, which he reorganized and reformed, greatly reducing the expense of maintenance while increasing its efficiency more than five-fold. While retaining this post, he acted, during the secretaryship of Lot M. Morrill, in 1876-'77, as chief clerk of the treasury department, after twice declining a regular appointment to that office. When he was made chief of the revenue marine division there were several buildings on the coast of New Jersey and Long Island in which were stored surf boats and simple appliances for the use of fishermen and wreckers in the rescue of shipwrecked persons. The keepers of these stations were scarcely more than mere custodians of the government property, and had generally been appointed on political grounds. During the winter of 1870-'71 several fatal disasters occurred on these coasts, and when he assumed office he made a tour of inspection and found that the stations were in a dilapidated condition, the keepers negligent and incapable, and the whole service inefficient. Congress appropriated $200,000 for fitting out and manning the stations, and the service was reorganized by Mr. Kimball so thoroughly that during the following winter every person who was imperilled by shipwreck on those coasts was rescued. The number of stations was increased, life-saving crews and modern appliances were provided for all of them, the incapable keepers were supplanted by expert surfmen, without regard to politics, and the patrol system for watching the entire coast was introduced. The success of the life-saving service during the first year caused it to be extended in 1872 to Cape Cod, and afterwards to other parts of the Atlantic coast. In 1878 the life-saving service was organized as a separate bureau, with Mr. Kimball as its head, and stations were established on the Pacific coast and on the great lakes. He is still at the head of this service, with his office in Washington, where he resides.

of the new machine and car shop of the Concord R. R. at Concord, N. H., and in 1850 was made master mechanic, a position that he held for eight years. In 1856 he was elected to the common council of the city of Concord, was re-elected in 1857 and was chosen president of the council. He was a member of the house of representatives of New Hampshire in 1858 and again in 1859. From 1859 to 1862 he was city marshal and collector of taxes for the city of Concord. In 1862 President Lincoln appointed him collector of internal revenue for the second district of New Hampshire, which position he held for seven years, collecting and paying over to the treasurer of the United States nearly seven millions of dollars. He was elected mayor of Concord in 1872-'73-'74-'75. During this time the system of water supply from Long Pond was successfully completed. He was elected one of the water commissioners and was president of the board. During his administration one wooden and two iron bridges were built across the rivers in the city, and the fire department was provided with new buildings and apparatus. In 1876 he was a member of the convention to revise the constitution of the state. In 1877 he was one of the three commissioners appointed by the governor to erect the new state prison. In 1880 he was elected president of the Concord Gas Light Co. In 1880 he was appointed by the supreme court of the state one of the three trustees of the Manchester and Keene R. R. In November, 1880, he was elected to the state senate, and on the organization of the senate in 1881 he was elected its president. He has been treasurer of the Merrimack County Savings Bank for many years; a director in the Mechanicks National Bank and the Republican Press Association, and treasurer of the New Hampshire Bible Society and the New Hampshire Orphans' Home; president of the Centennial Home for the Aged and New Hampshire Odd Fellows' Home. The degree of A. M. was conferred on him by Dartmouth College in 1882. In person he is tall and erect and of commanding presence. His modes of life are regular and he is a total abstainer through conviction and habit. While firm and decided in his views he is genial and courteous in personal intercourse. He is a careful reader with an inclination for historical and genealogical research. He has taken great interest in the history of his family, and at the cost of much time and labor compiled and published the history of the descendants of Joseph Kimball, his great grandfather. We are indebted to his researches for much information in regard to this branch of the family. He resides in Concord, N. H.

1600 Benjamin Ames Kimball<sup>8</sup> (Benjamin<sup>7</sup>, John<sup>6</sup>, Joseph<sup>5</sup>, John<sup>4</sup>, Caleb<sup>3</sup>, Richard<sup>2</sup>, Richard<sup>1</sup>) born in Boseawen, Aug. 22, 1833; married Jan. 19, 1861, Myra Tilton Elliott, daughter of Ira and Rhoda (Ames) Elliott of Sanbornton, N. H. He was graduated with honors from the Chandler Scientific School of Dartmouth College in July, 1854, receiving the degree of B. S. In Aug., 1854, he entered the service of the Concord R. R. as draftsman, and was promoted in April, 1856, to be foreman of the locomotive department. On the first of Jan., 1858, he succeeded his brother John as master mechanic, a position which he held until April 1, 1865, when he resigned to become a member of the firm of Ford and Kimball, manufacturers of car wheels and brass and iron founders. He long carried on this business successfully. In 1870 he was elected a member of the house of representatives, and declined a reelection in 1871. He was appointed in 1870 a member of a special committee appointed by the city council of Concord to procure plans for an aqueduct from Long Pond for the water supply of the city. In 1872 he was appointed a member of the water commissioners to construct the works upon the plans submitted by the committee. He was in the board for six years, and was its president for three years. In 1876 he was a member of the constitutional convention. He was president and trustee of the Concord Savings Bank, trustee of the Merrimack County Savings Bank, and director of the Mechanicks National Bank from its organization and is now its president. He was elected a director of the Concord R. R. in Jan., 1879. He has been very prominent in the affairs of the road, and had great influence

Dupont at Port Royal, S. C. Here he was specially detailed to repair the machinery of gunboats and transports, having in charge two old Nantucket whalers which had been fitted up with machinery, and on which a force of one hundred mechanics was employed. His services at this repair station were of great value, and he was personally complimented by Admiral Dupont for his good work. In June, 1863, he resigned his position in the navy and returned to Rochester and engaged in the tobacco manufacturing business, entering into partnership with Henry Suggett, whose business, established in 1846, had grown from a small beginning to proportions requiring more capital and the activity, energy, and mechanical experience of a young, wide-awake man. The business was conducted under the title of Suggett & Kimball until 1867, when Mr. Suggett retired and Mrs. Keeler, Mr. Kimball's mother-in-law, was admitted in his place. Three years later James C. Hart joined the firm. Mr. Kimball was president of the Post Express Printing Co., a trustee of the Rochester Savings Bank, president of the Union Bank, president of the City Hospital, president of the Industrial School, vice-president of the Security Trust Co., vice-president of the American Tobacco Co., director in the Rochester Railway Co., director in the Toronto and Hamilton and Buffalo Railroad Co., and vice-president of the Lyceum Theatre Co. Of marked originality and unquestioned resources of mind and capable of great physical and mental application, he was likewise intensely practical.

ROBERT J. KIMBALL.

Kennedy, set fire to ten crowded hotels and Barnum's Museum, in New York city, attempting to destroy as much of the city as possible, regardless of the sacrifice of human life. Fortunately the fires were discovered, and they failed in their purpose and fled to Canada. In his official duties as consul he met Kennedy, recognized him by a photograph, notified the authorities, so that when he returned to the United States he was captured, taken to Fort Lafayette in New York harbor, tried for violating the rules of war and acting as a spy, was convicted, and hanged on the twenty-fifth of March, 1865. The newspapers of the day characterized Kennedy as the most notorious prisoner confined in the fort during the war. He established his banking business in New York in 1865, where it still continues as R. J. Kimball & Co. In 1872, owing to a great decline in securities in a panic, he was unable to meet his payments and suspended. He settled with his creditors within forty-eight hours after his failure by the payment of twenty-five cents on the dollar, and received a discharge from any further obligation. In 1881 he paid the other seventy-five per cent., together with nine years' interest at six per cent., the whole amounting to many thousands of dollars. He has maintained a home in West Randolph since his father died in 1865, and in 1887 he built his residence known as Montague Place, and resumed his citizenship in the state. He was aide-de-camp on Governor Dillingham's staff, 1888-1890, represented the town of Randolph in the legislature, 1890-'91, and served on the committees of ways and means, banks, and special joint committee on the World's Columbian Exposition. He was appointed by Governor Fuller delegate representing the state to the bankers' congress at Chicago, 1893. He is trustee of the state normal school. While he has for many years been a member of the Baptist church, his liberal support to the cause has not been confined to that denomination. He has shown his generosity and public spirit in many ways in the different enterprises in his native town. He also has a home in Brooklyn, N. Y., where he has resided since 1868. He is connected with several of the charitable and other important public institutions of that city, among which are the following: A trustee of the Emmanuel Baptist church for many years, a life member of the Young Men's Christian Association, a life member and trustee in the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences, a director in the Brooklyn Art Association, a director in the Hamilton Club, a trustee in the People's Trust Company. He has been a member of the New York Stock Exchange since 1867, a member of the New York Chamber of Commerce, a member of the Philadelphia Stock Exchange, and a member of the Chicago Stock Exchange. He was instrumental in forming the Brooklyn Society of Vermonters, of which he was the first secretary, and afterwards president. He is a member of the Vermont State Societies of the Sons of the American Revolution, and of the Colonial Wars.

She was the daughter of Asher and Joanna Ames Palmer. She was an affectionate and kind wife and mother, a devout and consistent member and regular attendant of the Jewett City Baptist church. He married 2d, April 20, 1869, Althea T. Green of Griswold. She is still living. At the age of nineteen he went to sea, making a whaling voyage from New London to the Pacific ocean. He followed the sea for thirteen years in the merchant service mostly between New York and Boston and the West Indies. In 1853 he owned the brig Champion which was lost with all on board on a voyage from Norfolk, Va., laden with corn, near Point Judith. After the loss of this vessel, in which nearly the whole of his property was invested, he settled on a farm in Griswold near his birth-place. Here he has continued to live until the present time. He attends regularly and has long contributed to the support of the Jewett City Baptist church. He takes an active interest in town affairs and has many times been elected to offices of honor and trust in the town. At the age of seventy-two he still takes as keen an interest as ever in the management of his own business and town affairs, and shows the same good judgment and insight for which he has long been noted.

1764 Richard Bradbury Kimball<sup>8</sup> (Abraham L.<sup>7</sup>, Joshua<sup>6</sup>, John<sup>5</sup>, Joshua<sup>4</sup>, Joseph<sup>3</sup>, John<sup>2</sup>, Richard<sup>1</sup>) born in Buxton, Me., Jan. 15, 1825; died Jan. 22, 1865. He went to La Crosse in 1852, and for several years was superintendent of lumber camps on the North river. In 1861 he went to the war as sergeant of the First Wisconsin Volunteer Battery of Light Artillery. His skill as a gunner was remarkable, and he was excelled by none. He was engaged in some twenty battles including the assault and capture of Vicksburg and Jackson, Miss., and was in many forced marches. He reenlisted in 1864 in the Veterans' Corps, and was sent to Brashear City on the Gulf of Mexico, and remained in that vicinity until the surrender of Lee and the close of the war. He was six feet three inches in height and weighed two hundred and ten pounds, but the malaria, exposure, and fatiguing marches broke him down, and when brought home by

daughter of Hon. E. A. Converse of Staffordville, Conn. Mr. Converse was a man of very high character, whose business life spanned nearly half a century. Mr. Kimball was graduated at the Ellington Academy in 1848. He continued his studies in the classical department of the Williston Academy at Easthampton, Mass. After leaving this place he was appointed assistant principal at Ellington, Conn., Academy, a position that he resigned in order to take charge of the High school in the Greenville district of Norwich, Conn. He retained this position for three years. In both of these places the proficiency of his classes, especially in mathematics, attracted the attention of educators. He was noted for the skill with which he maintained order and discipline without apparent effort and with rare display of authority. He resigned his position in Greenville to become the principal of the Webster school in New Haven, where the corps of teachers under him numbered from twelve to fourteen. After remaining here for three years, although the work had many attractions for him, he decided that a career having broader relations with the world presented greater opportunities both for pleasure and profit. He accordingly resigned in 1860, and after a year spent in travel took up the permanent business of his life. In 1863 he went to Hartford and accepted the New England department of the Insurance Co. of North America, embracing all of New England except Boston. This company was established at Philadelphia in 1792, and is the oldest and, with a single exception, the largest, fire insurance company in the United States. For thirty years the relationship has continued without a ripple, to the eminent satisfaction of all parties. Considering the vicissitudes of the business, it is remarkable that the books of the office show a net profit for each year of that long term. In 1866 the Hartford Life and Annuity Insurance Co. began operations on a capital of $300,000, and at the end of twelve months found that about one third of that sum had been swallowed up in an experiment. Visions of bankruptcy alarmed the stockholders. Meanwhile the value of the shares had fallen one half, and some of the owners took steps preliminary to winding up the venture. At this juncture Mr. Kimball, after repeated

solicitations from the directors, consented to accept the presidency. He at once radically revised its aims and methods, infusing such vitality into its management that within three years the impairment of capital was made good from the business, and the company established on a dividend-paying basis. Having learned by observation what could be accomplished on the somewhat novel plans of the association, other parties quietly bought a controlling interest in the property for the purpose of handling it. As often happens in such cases, the promoters of the scheme failed to win the success which had allured them, though later the enterprise became solidly established. Mr. Kimball has for many years been constantly solicited to take part in the organization and management of new enterprises. Although compelled in many cases to decline, he has found time to aid in the establishment of several successful industrial and financial institutions. He was one of the corporators and has been from the beginning a director in the Security Company and in the Loan and Guarantee Company. He is a director in the Hartford Steam Boiler Inspection and Insurance Company. In association with William A. Healey he became a shareholder in what is now the Pratt & Cady Company, in its early days, and as director has been identified with its remarkable growth. In 1884 he accepted the presidency of the Smyth Manufacturing Company, which has developed the patents and manufactures the only American machine for sewing books with thread. From small beginnings, and in the face of many obstacles, the machine has been gradually introduced into many leading binderies in all parts of the world. Even Russia has several in operation, and a number have found their way to Australia. The mechanism so combines simplicity with ingenuity, and is covered by so many patents, that it is not likely to have a rival for a long time to come. Mr. Kimball has always refused to be a candidate for political offices, but his deep interest in education has led him to take an active part in the management of his local school district, and he has served as a member of the board of school visitors of the town. On the formation of the Hartford board of trade, in 1888, he was elected first vice-president, and has been annually re-elected since. An intimate knowledge of mechanical principles, skill in detecting the vital excellences and defects of mechanical contrivances, and a broad acquaintance with practical affairs, have made his services in this position particularly valuable to the association and to the public. His sons are both graduates of Yale College and live in Hartford, Conn.

March 20, 1828, died, April 8, 1871, daughter of Hon. William Porter, of Turner, Me. She was a lady of great loveliness and rare excellence of character. He married, 2d, Helen A. (Getchell) Sparhawk, of Chicago, Ill., born Jan. 31, 1848, who survived him, and lives in New York city. She was the daughter of Henry F. Getchell, formerly of Anson, Me. He learned the trade of carriage smith with his brother, J. M. Kimball, at Bridgton, Me., and when twenty-one years old he established a carriage manufactory at Bridgton. His force of character, the marked resources of his mechanical genius, and his great business capacity were quickly apparent. No detail of his business was too trifling to receive his attention, and he overcame all obstacles. His success was remarkable, and the works were so quickly and largely increased that scores of people were in his employ, and the liveliest and most prosperous days of that town were when this carriage works was in full operation. The growth of the business demanded increased facilities, and in 1854, he moved to Portland, Me., and soon had two large carriage manufactories in successful operation. He was at that time a member of Kimball Bros., in Boston, Mass. He had great originality and skill as a carriage designer, which secured originality and excellence in his work, and has given him a world-wide reputation. His extensive business was remunerative to a high degree, but did not change the simplicity of his deportment or the unassuming plainness of his mode of life. He was surveyor of the port of Portland and Falmouth, and was an alderman of Portland in 1860 and 1861. He was an earnest war Democrat, and in the latter year was very active in securing aid to the families of those who were fighting for their country. In 1869, he presided over the Maine Democratic State convention, was nominated for governor, and declined the nomination. He was again nominated by the Democrats in 1871 and 1872, and failed of an election. He was an active member of the Maine Charitable Association, and was its president until he left Portland. In 1876, he was appointed a commissioner from Maine to the Centennial, but resigned the position. He removed from Portland, in 1876, and entered the employ of Brewster & Co., of New York city, the largest carriage establishment in the United States. He was immediately appointed by Gov. Tilden of New York, a commissioner to the Centennial and was one of the executive committee in charge of that fair. Later he removed to Chicago, Ill., and built up a large manufacturing business, now a stock company, known as the C. F. Kimball Company, which is managed by his son, Fred Kimball. He was appointed, by President Cleveland, United States consul to Stuttgart, Germany, where he remained two years, when he was compelled to resign on account of poor health. His management of the consulate was completely satisfactory to the government.

man in the manufactory of his brother, Charles P. Kimball, at New Haven, Conn. He was at the head of this establishment, which turned out three thousand carriages a year. Every kind of vehicle that went on wheels, whether built for pleasure or business, was manufactured, and the factory became widely and favorably known. His health was impaired by close attention to business, and at the close of the war he travelled extensively in the South, having two objects in view, the restoration of his health, and the selection of a place for business. Atlanta, Ga., was chosen as one of the most favorable localities in the South, and results have justified the wisdom of his choice. He went to that city in 1866, and when Georgia decided to establish the seat of government in that city, he purchased the unfinished opera house, and under contract with the state he reconstructed it into a spacious, convenient, and substantial capitol. In 1870 he laid out, graded, and fitted up with walks and drives the Oglethorpe Park, now the pride of the city. There the state fairs have been held, and there was located the Cotton Exposition. In the same year he built the "H. I. Kimball House," an elegant and massive hotel costing $675,000. About the same time he constructed one hundred and fifty miles of railroad leading into the city of Atlanta. Three years later he organized a company, planned, erected, and put in successful operation a cotton factory of 24,000 spindles. Atlanta quickly became an important railway center, new lines were built, and old ones connected with the city. He became connected with many of them in an official way. He was the promoter and organizer of the Pullman car service in the South. When the great International Cotton Exposition was decided upon and Atlanta selected for the site, he was placed in charge as director-general, and largely through his executive ability it was brought to a successful issue. In the winter of 1881-'82, at the meeting of the American Agricultural Association in New York, he read a very valuable paper on the resources and condition of the Southern states, which was published in full in the proceedings. He was a republican in politics, a prohibitionist, and, with every member of his family, a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. In the spring of 1893 he went to Chieago and took an active part in organizing the great Chicago Fair. In July he was elected president of the board of judges in the department of liberal arts. This office he conducted with his usual energy, attending to the duties faithfully until the close of the Fair in October. The position was one requiring much tact and firmness. Among many conflicting elements he always seemed to keep cool and good natured, with pleasant words for every one. It was my good fortune to be intimately connected with him during this term of service, and I ever found him earnest to find out the right course and to follow it.

He learned the trade of a carriage manufacturer in New Haven, Conn. He served in the Union army until he was discharged on account of ill health. He spent one year in Australia as agent of a London and New York shipping house, returning through Europe, thus going around the world, before he was twenty-five years of age. After some months spent in Central City, Colo., in mining, he went to Chicago, Ill., and was a superintendent for the Pullman Sleeping Car Co., for some years. He then went to Boston, Mass., and became a member of the firm of Kimball Bros. Later he went into business with his father-in-law, George Cook, as successors to the firm of Hallet & Davis, piano manufacturers. He lives in Brookline, Mass.

He early developed a decided taste for teaching. He taught at Harrison village from 1845 to 1850. He then went to New York and secured a position as teacher in a large boarding school near Tarrytown, N. Y. His father having died he returned to Maine in 1851 and spent two years in settling the estate. He then taught two years in the Mechanic's Institute on Chandler St., New York. He afterwards served two years as principal of School No. 14, in Brooklyn, N. Y. He was then elected as principal of Ward School No. 2, in Henry School, N. Y., where he superintended thirty teachers. He remained there eight years. In 1864, the school board of New York became Democratic, and he was removed from his position solely on political grounds. He served two terms as alderman in the city of Brooklyn, covering the whole period of the War of the Rebellion. After he was dismissed from his position as principal he immediately commenced business on Wall street, New York, as a stock and bond broker, and for twenty-five years did a successful business. For fourteen years the firm name was C. H. Kimball & Co., and since that time it has been Kimball, Howell & Co. For thirteen years he has been associated with the persons engaged in the development of the summer and winter resort at Lakewood, N. J., having been president of the Lakewood Hotel and Land Association since its organization in 1879.

His early life was spent in working on the farm and attending district school. Later he spent two terms in the academy at St. Johnsbury and two terms in the academy at Peacham, and kept district school one term in the town of Lyndon. He left home before he was twenty-one, and went to Boston to seek his fortune, and to make a name and a reputation for himself. He reached there with less than seven dollars, but he knew that a hard day's work meant a dollar, and he accepted the situation. After remaining in Boston about three years he removed to New York city, and engaged in the wholesale fruit trade, making the buying and selling of apples a specialty. Afterwards, as his business increased, he associated with him his brothers, Benjamin and Austin, and his cousin, Hazen. The operations of the house extended from west of the Missouri river to Nova Scotia, the sales reaching among the hundreds of thousands of barrels annually. So widely was he known, and so extensive was his business, that he was called the "Apple King" of the world. In 1889 he was elected president of the Gansevoort bank of the city of New York. He stood high as a good citizen, a man with many warm personal friends, thus demonstrating that industry, sagacity, integrity, and trust in God, with strong, persistent efforts, will lead to good results. He died after a brief illness, and is buried in Barton, Vt.

1862 John Kimball<sup>8</sup> (John H.<sup>7</sup>, John<sup>6</sup>, John<sup>5</sup>, Benjamin<sup>4</sup>, Richard<sup>3</sup>, Benjamin<sup>2</sup>, Richard<sup>1</sup>) born in Barton, Vt., Oct. 10, 1831; married Jan. 18, 1864, Annie M. Eskridge, daughter of Rev. Vernon and Sarah A. Eskridge of Portsmouth, Va. He was graduated at Dartmouth College in 1856, and at Union Theological Seminary, in New York city, in 1859. After a year in mission work in New York city he went by the overland stage to California, where he was pastor of the Congregational church in Grass Valley and the Second Congregational church in San Francisco until February, 1863, when he returned East and was in the service of the U. S. Christian Commission with the army until the autumn of 1864, at which time he was appointed U. S. chaplain in Carver Hospital, Washington, D. C. He was mustered out in July, 1865, and was immediately appointed on the staff of Generals C. H. and O. O. Howard, and was employed as superintendent of schools in the Freedmen's Bureau, with his office in Washington. He occupied this position until November, 1869. He then returned to California and spent the next ten years in the ministry at San Francisco and Oakland, making occasional trips East, preaching in Chicago, Ill., and Brooklyn, N. Y., and paying a visit to Europe in 1873. In 1878 he became one of the publishers and managing editor of The Pacific at San Francisco, the oldest paper in California, established in 1851, and the organ of the Congregational church on the Pacific coast.

- ii. Mary Jennette Whitehill<sup>9</sup>, b. Peacham, Vt., Nov. 9, 1862; m. May 25, 1887, Lewis A. Bigelow. Resides in Everett, Mass. She was educated at Peacham Academy and at Mt. Holyoke Seminary, South Hadley, Mass.

hood was spent. He taught school several winters, and commenced the study of law, but the war coming on he laid aside his books and took up the musket. With many other Glover boys, he enlisted in Co. D, Sixth Vt. Regt. This regiment was mustered into the service of the U. S. Oct. 15, 1861, at Montpelier, and immediately started for the seat of war. During the following winter the regiment was quartered at Camp Griffin, Va., and was brigaded with four other Vermont regiments. The brigade afterwards became famous as the "Old Vermont Brigade," making a record second to no other organization in the entire army. He participated in the battles of Lee's Mills, Williamsburg, Golding's Farm, Savage Station, White Oak Swamp, Malvern Hill, Harrison's Landing, Second Bull Run, South Mountain, Antietam, first and second Fredericksburg, Maryland Heights, Bank's Ford, Gettysburg, and Funkstown, besides many other minor engagements and skirmishes. He was promoted through several grades, and from early in 1863 commanded his company in all of its subsequent battles while he remained with his regiment. He was wounded at Bank's Ford, May 4, 1863, and again very severely in the left thigh at Funkstown, Md., July 10, 1863. From the effects of this wound he never fully recovered. At Bank's Ford, when his regiment charged Early's assailing columns, the enemy was thrown into great confusion by the unexpected attack, broke and ran, hotly pursued by the Sixth Vermont with fixed bayonets. His belt plate turned a minié ball and saved his life, but the glancing ball wounded him slightly in the arm. The regiment captured over four hundred prisoners in this charge. One Confederate captain, who had been shot through the face, surrendered his sword to Captain Kimball, together with a remnant of his company, who then threw down their muskets, and being placed in the charge of two or three privates, were ordered to the rear. Captain Kimball had only turned to go forward, when a rebel, who had surrendered, picked up a gun which was lying on the ground, and was in the very act of shooting him, when the movement was seen by Sergeant Cleveland of his company, who, with the quickness of thought, drew his gun upon the rebel and shot him dead. Thus was Captain Kimball's life twice almost miraculously saved during that one engagement. When wounded in the Battle of Funkstown, he remained in command of his company until his boot filled with blood. This fight was one of the hardest of the whole war for a small one. The Vermont brigade, a mile and a half from any support, deployed as skirmishers, repelled the attack made again and again by an entire Confederate division. At Antietam his haversack was carried away by a grapeshot, and several times his clothing was pierced by bullets. After being wounded at Funkstown he was never again able to perform field service, and was honorably discharged by order of the secretary of war, Oct. 22, 1863, but within a week thereafter he was commissioned by President Lincoln a second lieutenant in the Veteran Reserve Corps. From this time until the close of the war he performed post and garrison duties at various places, a portion of the time at Brattleboro and St. Albans, Vt. For meritorious conduct he received several promotions, again reaching the rank of captain. After the close of the war Captain Kimball was assigned to duty in the Freedmen's Bureau, and stationed in Virginia as superintendent of several counties, with headquarters at Lawrenceville. There, in the midst of a people so recently in rebellion, his life was a number of times in jeopardy. He remained four years in the discharge of most difficult and trying duties, to protect the negro in his newly acquired freedom. He was shot at several times, and received KuKlux letters ordering him to leave the country under pain of death. His noble wife stood by him through it all. At one time, when he was assaulted by four ex-rebels, with intent to kill, she saved his life by running to his rescue with a revolver, and after some hard fighting they succeeded in driving the men away. They were ostracised from society and subjected to many indignities by the ex-Confederates. During the time while Captain Kimball was in charge of the Freedmen's Bureau he had supervision of the registration and elections, and also organized and sustained the colored schools. He was chosen a delegate from the fourth congressional district of Virginia to the Republican convention that met in Chicago May 20, 1868, and nominated General Grant for president. The Freedmen's Bureau expired by limitation of law Jan. 1, 1869, and at that time Captain Kimball received an honorable discharge after an unbroken service of over seven years. He was republican candidate for state senator, and was urged by his friends to run for congress, but being young and without legislative experience, he declined to do so, though the field was clear. He was appointed, soon after his discharge from the service, by General Stoneman, then provincial governor of Virginia, clerk of the county and circuit courts of Brunswick county. This office he held for about six months, when he resigned it, and also his candidacy for state senator, and emigrated to the West, settling in Cameron, Mo., in September, 1869. For several years he engaged in mercantile pursuits. In 1872 he was elected a member of the city council and was the acting mayor of the town. In 1884 he was appointed postmaster by President Arthur and held the office until a change of administration. He then removed with his family to Colorado, where he engaged successfully in the real estate business for four years, returning again to Cameron, his old home, in the fall of 1890, where he could have better schooling for his children. Since 1892 he has been secretary and manager of the Aetna Loan Co. of Kansas. He resides in Topeka, Kansas.

1872 Edward Dorr Kimball<sup>8</sup> (William R.<sup>7</sup>, Eliphalet<sup>6</sup>, Eliphalet<sup>6</sup>, Job<sup>4</sup>, Richard<sup>3</sup>, Benjamin<sup>2</sup>, Richard<sup>1</sup>) born April 16, 1825; married Sept. 12, 1860, Jeanette Ripley Treat, daughter of James Treat, born Aug. 10, 1835, died July 15, 1888. He was educated at the Kimball Union Academy, Meriden, N. H. He became one of the partners in the firm of J. P. Squires & Co., of Boston. In 1866 he closed his connection with this firm and removed to Cornish, N. H., where he owned and lived upon a large and productive farm. After the death of his only child, the farm became unbearable to him and he removed to Chelsea, Mass., and entered into partnership with George N. Squires, in the provision business in Faneuil Hall Market, Boston. After five years, Mr. Squires withdrew from the business and Mr. Kimball continued it alone until 1889, when he retired. In June, 1884, he became a special partner in the firm of John F. Lennon, flour and grain commission dealer, in Pawtucket, R. I. This house soon became the largest of its kind in New England. Since 1890, he has not been engaged in business, except the general care of the stock farm at Newport, N. H., owned by him and managed by his brother, Henry M. Kimball. He is a noble, Christian man, who has spent his life in doing for others. He is generous, sympathetic, and thoughtful for the wants of the needy. Worthy young persons have been educated at academies and colleges. Public institutions have been aided by him. The chapel at Mt. Auburn, Mass., was largely built with his money. Missionaries and needy ministers have been supported by him. He and his wife were zealous in aiding missionary organizations, and since her death he has continued in the good work, doing it all so quietly that even his most intimate friends do not know of its extent. His wife was a woman of literary and musical ability, a devout Christian, and an earnest worker in all church work, a great student of the bible, and gave most liberally to both home and foreign missions. He lives in Watertown, Mass.

1936 Catherine Green Orvis<sup>8</sup> (Sarah Kimball<sup>7</sup>, Edward<sup>6</sup>, Jonathan<sup>5</sup>, Samuel<sup>4</sup>, David<sup>3</sup>, Benjamin<sup>2</sup>, Richard<sup>1</sup>) married John P. Squire, son of Peter Squire, of Weathersfield, Vt.; d. Jan. 7, 1893. He came to Boston a poor boy; when he died he was among the most wealthy of its merchants. He commenced the pork business in a small way; and at the time of his death he was the head of the largest pork packing establishment in New England. He always took a great pride in the quality of the products of his factory. A few years ago he commenced a fight against adulterated lard at first almost single handed. But eventually he succeeded in his efforts, and it is due to his work that lard compounds are properly branded in all parts of the country at present. A large pork packer once remarked to the writer that John P. Squire always bought the best hogs that could be obtained in the market in Chicago or Kansas City. His establishment covers many acres of ground at East Cambridge, Mass., and is filled with the most improved machinery. He was just and generous in his treatment of those employed by him. Resided in Arlington, Mass.

absence from home was when he went with a younger brother on a six months' fishing voyage from Truro, Mass. His father and grandfather were contractors and builders and he and his brothers early became familiar with the business. January 20, 1860, he and his brother, Charles H. Kimball, sailed for San Francisco, Cal., by way of the Isthmus of Panama, arriving in San Francisco on the 11th of February, 1860. They spent a year with indifferent success in the land of gold and returned to Hopkinton. They had gained much experience and L. W. Kimball decided to return to California. His brothers, Warren C. and Francis A., accompanied him. They arrived in San Francisco, Sept. 14, 1861, and commenced business as carpenters and builders under the firm name of Kimball Brothers in November, 1861. They succeeded in this business beyond their most sanguine expectations. They endured great hardships and privations during the winter of 1861-'62, which was a winter of unusual severity. They boarded themselves in their shop, doing their own cooking and eating their breakfasts and suppers by lamplight, and having a cold lunch for dinner, often walking two miles to their work and sleeping in bunks at night. In the spring of 1862, Levi W. Kimball decided to try the gold mines in British Columbia. He arrived at Victoria in June with two experienced miners as companions. They camped there for a month but did not meet with any success; they, at the end of that time, returned to California, where his brothers were finding plenty of work. In 1863, the Kimball Brothers were awarded a contract in Oakland, Cal., for which they received thirty thousand dollars. In the spring of 1864 he made a pedestrian tour into the Sierra Nevada mountains, prospecting in the "Silver Mountain region." He went as far as Virginia City, and further east. He found but little worth developing owing to the inaccessibility of the region. He had, however, the experience, even if the journey was without pecuniary returns. On his homeward trip he was crushed beneath an overturned stage coach, and it was three months before he recovered sufficiently to continue his journey. This substantially finished his mining adventures. Kimball Brothers continued in successful business in Oakland, and in 1865 did a large amount of public work in San Francisco; 1867 was their most prosperous year as builders, one contract alone amounting to nearly a hundred thousand dollars. The members of the firm acquired valuable real estate in Oakland. He spent the winter of 1867-'68 in New Hampshire, returning to California in the spring of 1868. This year he and his brother, F. A. Kimball, went to San Diego to examine the Rancho de la Nacion, of which their firm had the refusal. It consisted of 26,632 acres, and was situated on the widest part of San Diego bay and harbor with six miles continuous water frontage, and it extended seven miles back from the bay, and was adjacent to the city of San Diego. This property they carefully examined and completed the purchase. The financial troubles of 1872-'73 interfered most seriously with the success of plans that had been well made, and much property was lost by the firm. In 1875 he withdrew from the firm of Kimball Brothers, disposing of his interest to his brothers, and removed to Oakland. He still retained his city property in San Diego, National City, and in the Ranch. In 1880-'81, through the exertions of Francis A. Kimball, the Californian Southern Pacific railroad was induced to build into National City, make its terminus there, and establish its works. Soon after came a great boom in real estate. Land bought for a trifle brought almost fabulous prices. Levi W. Kimball had sold most of his property before this great speculation, and does not regret that he possesses none of the "boom gold." His history is of necessity the history of the Kimball Brothers. For fifteen years their lives were most intimately connected by business interests they all shared alike. They are each now more than millionaires. They have done a great work for southern California. Resides at Oakland, Cal.

2025 Daniel Burns Dyer<sup>8</sup> (Elizabeth Howe Kimball<sup>7</sup>, Joseph<sup>6</sup>, Samuel<sup>5</sup>, Aaron<sup>4</sup>, David<sup>3</sup>, Benjamin<sup>2</sup>, Richard<sup>1</sup>) born on a farm near Joliet, Ill., March 21, 1849; married, Nov., 1870, Ida May Casey, born Mound City, Ill., April 20, 1849, daughter of Hon. Newton R. Casey, and granddaughter of Zadock Casey, once governor of Illinois. She is a well educated and accomplished woman, and is much esteemed by her numerous friends for her social and attractive manners. He was educated in the State Normal University, of Illinois. In 1869 he went to the plains and represented the government among the Indians, until 1885. While an Indian agent he took the celebrated and savage Madoes and settled them in houses on farms in the northeast part of Indian territory, at the same time he had charge of several other tribes. But the only ones that gave him trouble were the Modocs. About 1883 he was transferred and placed in charge of the Cheyennes and Arapahoes whom he left in 1885. In that year he went to Kansas City, Mo., and engaged in the real estate and brokerage business. He then became associated with the wealthy parties who compose the Jarvis Conklin Syndicate. Colonel Dyer was connected with the building of the magic city of Guthrie in Oklahoma territory. It was a most interesting period of his eventful life. He was familiar with the country, and went there in 1889 largely from curiosity and to invest in real estate. Things were in a chaotic state, and he being well known, was chosen as mayor, a position that he did not wish, but which he was prevailed upon to accept. He held the office for three months or more. He fully appreciated the difficulties attending the founding of a new town, and managing 15,000 or 18,000 people for whom new laws are to be made, and never did he work harder and never were his executive ability and good judgment put to a more severe test. After three months he returned to Kansas City and soon after went to Augusta, Ga., and engaged in business enterprises of great magnitude. The Jarvis-Conklin Syndicate with which he is connected controls millions of dollars. In the city of Augusta alone it has spent more than $500,000 for the development of the city. They built and run successfully an extensive electric railway system, besides being engaged in other large concerns.

trade, in 1855, when only seventeen years old, he persuaded his father to allow him to leave school and engage in business. He went to Boston, made his own purchases, and embarked in his first business enterprise, and for two years was a popular young merchant in his native town. The glowing accounts of the gold mines on the Pacific coast filled him with a desire for a new and wider field in which to operate. When he made known his design, the family gave their consent with great reluctance. His father relieved him from his business and furnished him with the means to go to California. He also, to provide against any contingencies, gave him a draft for six hundred dollars, to be used if he was sick or if he failed to pay his passage home, fully expecting to see him return disgusted with his folly. Neither contingency happened, and the draft was returned to his father, unused. He went to California with a number of other young men from Calais. They went together from New York, all agreeing to start at the bottom of the ladder. They therefore secured steerage passage on the Moses Taylor, and at Panama were transferred to the Golden Gate. The journey was one of great risk. The ships were packed with passengers, and the small-pox broke out among them. It created quite a panic among the passengers, but was fortunately checked. The vessel afterwards caught fire, but the fire was got under control, and they were safely landed in San Francisco in October, 1857. Upon reaching California he had but thirty-five dollars left. His first work was piling lumber for Mr. Z. B. Haywood, an old friend of his father, to whom he had a letter. The young men kept bachelors' hall in a house on Pacific street. He then purchased a one-horse dray, and the good will of the business, from a man who was homesick and wished to return to the states. He continued this business for several months, clearing a hundred dollars a month, until the former owner returned and bought back his business. He then accepted from General Reddington a position on one of the California Steam Navigation Co.'s vessels. He soon became familiar with steamboating, and was advanced to the position of clerk on the boats running from Sacramento to Red Bluff, then the head of navigation on the Sacramento river.

During this time, which ended about 1860, he enjoyed the advantage of being an inmate of General Reddington's home. His aunt, Mrs. Reddington, was very much attached to him, and to her kind influence he feels that he owes much. His health became impaired while steamboating, and he regained it by two seasons spent in hunting and fishing in the Coast Range mountains. His next business venture was a partnership with General Reddington in sheep raising. After two years spent in this business, he drove his sheep east to the Missouri river. The journey was attended with much hardship, as he had to pass through the wilderness then inhabited only by Indians. He sold his sheep and bought mules, and drove them back to Sacramento, making a handsome profit out of the trip. The debts of the firm being paid off, he loaned his share of the profits to a friend, and lost it. For two years he bought fat sheep and drove them into the mines at Virginia City, Nevada. Then for a short time he returned to steamboating, but again his health failed, and his friend, Dr. Simpson, advised him to leave the river and engage in outdoor pursuits. He therefore went to Tehama county and engaged in real estate transactions. He was very successful in his operations, and acquired large tracts of cheap but valuable lands. In 1870 he again engaged in the sheep business, forming a partnership with J. C. Tyler. He took the active management of the business, and it grew to large dimensions. They made extensive additions to their lands, and have been instrumental in developing this business in Tehama and Shasta counties. In 1875 he formed a partnership with L. S. Welton, in the mercantile business. Mr. Welton retired from the business in 1876, and the firm of Cone & Kimball was formed, Mr. Kimball taking the active management of the business, which was conducted with his characteristic energy. They largely increased their capital and became leading men in the business, handling largely wheat, wool, and dried fruit, in northern California. In politics he has always been a republican, and has been an active member of the republican state committee for years. In 1882 he was nominated for the state board of equalization, and in his district ran far ahead of his ticket. He takes a great interest in local affairs, and has held the office of president of the board of town trustees several times. Was president of the board of trade, and is now president of the agricultural society of Tehama county. He has been prominent in military affairs, and is now, at his own request, a major on the retired list of the National Guard of California. He has for many years been a prominent Mason, has been master of Vesper Lodge No. 84, and generalissimo of Red Bluff Commandery No. 17, and has always taken an active interest in the welfare of the order. Although not a member of the church, he has been for many years chairman of the board of trustees of the Presbyterian church of Red Bluff, and one of its most efficient and zealous supporters. He took an active interest in the building of their large and beautiful church, and besides giving liberally towards the building, presented a magnificent memorial window. Besides being a practical business man, he has considerable power as a public speaker. Whether delivering a political speech upon the leading issues of the day, or making an after-dinner speech, he is always listened to with pleasure. His keen perception and clear logic are not more marked in the one place than his happy wit and bright humor in the other, and these qualities make his presence indispensable on all occasions. His home is most beautifully embowered in vines and roses. His home grounds comprise about three acres dotted over with choice flowers, shrubs, and trees, in semi-tropical magnificence. The Sacramento river flows at the foot of the beautiful lawn. From the house the snow-capped Sierra Nevada is seen to the eastward, and the towering Coast Range in the west, and Mount Shasta, with its perennial coat of white, is visible in the north.

2345 Elbert L. Kimball<sup>9</sup> (Virgil W.<sup>8</sup>, Royal<sup>7</sup>, Jonathan<sup>6</sup>, Boyce<sup>5</sup>, Ebenezer<sup>4</sup>, Samuel<sup>3</sup>, Richard<sup>2</sup>, Richard<sup>1</sup>) born in North Cohocton, Steuben Co., N. Y., Oct. 6, 1843; died Oct. 6, 1889; married Dec. 24, 1870, Rose L. Acre, born Oct. 22, 1852. He moved to Missouri with his parents when he was eleven years of age. He was living at Springfield, Mo., attending school, when the war began. He enlisted as a private in the Union army, July 7, 1861, and was engaged in all the stirring events in Missouri from that time until after the Battle of Wilson's Creek and the retreat to Rolla. He was discharged at Rolla at the end of three months' service. He was then given a place in the quartermaster's department, where he remained till April, 1862. In the fall of 1862 he returned to his old home in New York, where he enlisted in Co. G, One Hundred and Eighty-ninth New York Vols., and was at once sent to Virginia, where he served until Lee's surrender. He was mustered out at Elmira, N. Y., June 2, 1865. He was graduated from the law department of Michigan University in 1868, and settled at Nevada, Mo. He practised his profession at this place until his death. He was an active member of the G. A. R., and was at one time commander of the Department of Missouri. He was active in political matters. In 1886 he was the republican candidate for congress from the twelfth Missouri district. In 1888 he was the candidate for governor on the republican ticket. A few months before his death he wrote to us: "This year received the republican nomination for governor of Missouri. Made a splendid race against odds, being defeated by a little over 13,000 votes, running ahead of the presidential ticket 6,278 votes." In recognition of his splendid work and of his ability he was appointed by President Harrison, U. S. district attorney. He died suddenly in the midst of his life work, at Kansas City, Mo. He was an able, brilliant, pushing man, and had he lived would have taken an active part in the new life that has been aroused in Missouri.

Pennsylvania, and at the Lawrence Scientific School of Harvard University. He was graduated from the Scientific School in 1866, receiving the degree of Bachelor of Science, Summa Cum Laude. He presented as his graduation thesis a collection of tables for the use of chemists, entitled "Chemical Tables." This was published in the summer of 1866. The next winter he spent as private assistant to Dr. Wolcott Gibbs, in the Lawrence Scientific School. Returning to Pennsylvania he taught in a private school for a few months, and then received the appointment of instructor in chemistry in the Lehigh University of Bethlehem, Pa. He resigned this appointment at the end of the school year to accept the appointment of assistant under Dr. Gibbs in the Lawrence Scientific School. This position was held until the organization of the school was changed in 1871. He was then employed as assistant editor of the Boston Journal of Chemistry until after the great Boston fire, when he commenced business for himself as an analytical chemist and assayer. He was appointed assayer of ores and metals for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, in December, 1872, a position that he held until 1894, when the office was abolished. In 1884 he was appointed by Governor Robinson assayer and inspector of liquors for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. He has been annually reappointed to this position since that time. For seventeen years he was professor of chemistry in the Boston Dental College, holding the position until compelled to resign by pressure of other business. He served for three years as inspector of milk for the city of Cambridge. During this time he wrote several articles on adulteration of food. One of these, written for the state board of health of Massachusetts, was the basis of the food legislation of the state. He was one of the experts appointed on the census of 1880, and conducted a long series of experiments on the properties of the woods of the United States. These experiments were published in the ninth volume of the census, forming about a third part of that volume. The summer of 1893 was spent in Chicago, as one of the judges of the Columbian Exposition. He served there as a secretary of the committee of the department of liberal arts, that had charge of the chemical exhibits. After finishing the work in this department he was placed in charge of groups seventeen and eighteen in the agricultural department. These groups comprised the animal and vegetable oils, fertilizers, and waste products, this being a branch of applied science to which he had paid much attention. He also had charge of the starches. He has been engaged in many important patent suits as an expert, among the most notable of these being the green corn cases, in which was involved the novelty of the processes of packing corn. For many years he has been consulting chemist to the Philadelphia Rubber Works, being employed in investigating methods for reclaiming rubber that has been once used, and converting it into a useful commercial article. He has made many long journeys in the United States and Canada in the course of his business. He was among the first to investigate the fossil phosphates in Florida. In 1882 he made a trip to Turks Island and the Caicos to investigate the guano deposits on Cape Comet. He made a report on these which was published in the proceedings of the Boston Natural History Society. A few years later he made a trip to the north coast of Newfoundland, to examine the deposits of iron pyrites on that coast. He is a member of a number of scientific societies, among which are the American Society of Arts and Sciences, the American Chemical Society, the American Philosophical Society of Philadelphia, the American Institute of Mining Engineers, the American Association for the Advancement of Science, and the Society of Industrial Chemistry of England. He is also a member of the New England Historic Genealogical Society. They reside in Cambridge, Mass.

KIMBALLS OF YORK COUNTY, MAINE.

The Kimball family has always been well represented in York county, Maine. Some members of the family have been easily identified as descendants of Richard Kimball of Ipswich. In other cases it has been impossible to connect these families in any way with Richard Kimball. Most prominent among the Kimballs of the county are those of Wells. Their descendants moved to Lyman and other towns. The family at one time was quite numerous in this town, but the town records are very defective, and it has been almost impossible to trace the family by means of these records. An effort was made to trace them by means of the county records at Alfred, with but little better success. We are able, therefore, to present only several detached, fragmentary records of the family in this locality. We have tried to arrange these families properly, but there may be errors in some cases. The family themselves seem to have no records extending further back than 1800.

1 Caleb Kimball<sup>1</sup>. The first mention we have been able to find of Caleb Kimball of Wells, Me., is his marriage to Susanna Cloyes, June 15, 1704. Susanna was probably the daughter of Nathaniel Cloyes. She was received into full communion on proof of faith, Sept. 6, 1713. Caleb Kimball of Wells sells land in Wells, July 10, 1710. Caleb Kimball and wife Susanna sell land on Ogunquid river to Thomas Mason, Nov. 12, 1716. Caleb Kimball and wife Susanna, and Abigail Wiggins, widow of James Wiggins, sell all rights in land formerly Thomas Mills', Feb. 16, 1720. Caleb Kimball of Wells, James Smith of York, John Fulson of Exeter, and Abigail Wiggins of Wells, divide a tract of land, July 1, 1718. Abbie Wiggins and Caleb Kimball are to have two acres more and some marsh land in consideration of the maintenance of their grandfather, and for debts they have paid for their uncle, John Mills. Caleb Kimball bought one fourth of Kennebunk Falls of Samuel Littlefield, Sept. 4, 1732.

Nathaniel Kimball of Wells was a juryman, July, 1737. Nathaniel Kimball of Wells, and wife, Abigail, and children of John Cousins, and Abigail Wiggins, widow of John Cousins and mother of Abigail Kimball, make a deed, July 2, 1726. Nathaniel was chosen constable and paid a fine in 1736. He was a second lieutenant on the expedition to Louisburg in 1745. He petitioned for the incorporation of the parish in 1750, and signed the covenant the same year. His house was near the Kennebunk river, and he was called the father of Kennebunk. He was taxed £3.13s.6d. in 1750. He was on the committee on the parsonage in 1755, and was on the committee on delegates to congress in 1775, and on the committee of safety in 1776. He gave two shirts and one pair of stockings for the army in 1778. He built the first vessel in Kennebunk, and kept the first post-office in the state of Maine. He kept a public house in 1761.

For several years he was engaged in the manufacture of furnaces and ranges in New York city, residing in Brooklyn. He failed in the panic of 1857. He next engaged in the dredging business, taking important contracts for deepening and straightening the channels of Mobile harbor, Alabama, the St. John's river, Florida, and the Mississippi river at New Orleans. While in the latter city he organized a tow-boat company. The outbreak of the Civil War broke up his business and his boats were seized by the Confederate government. His largest boat, the Enoch Train, became the rebel ram, Manassas. He declined a position in the rebel service, and by this action lost any chance he might have had of receiving compensation for his vessels seized by the rebels. He immediately proceeded to Washington with all possible speed, to inform the government in regard to the fitting out of the ram by the Confederates. In 1861 he was appointed acting master in the U. S. navy, and served with great ability and success until his death in 1863. He was stationed at Charlestown the most of the time, and was inspector of open contracts, and by his activity and vigilance saved the government a large amount of money in purchasing supplies.

12 Caroline Low Kimball<sup>4</sup> (George<sup>3</sup>, Nathaniel<sup>2</sup>, Abraham<sup>1</sup>) born Oct. 22, 1845; married Aug. 7, 1867, Parker Hallett Clark, born —, died April, 1868, son of Erastus W. Clark of Westmoreland, N. Y.; married 2d, June 15, 1871, Col. Gilman H. Tucker, son of General Henry and Nancy (Dudley) Tucker of Raymond, N. H. He is a descendant of Richard Tucker, who came to New England in 1630, and was one of the founders of Portland, Me. He is also descended from Gov. Thomas Dudley of the Massachusetts Bay colony, and from John Gilman of Exeter, N. H. He was graduated from Dartmouth College in the class of 1861. Soon after leaving college he was appointed on the staff of Gov. Nathaniel S. Berry, and assisted in the organization and equipment of the New Hampshire regiments that were sent to assist in putting down the Rebellion. Since 1862 he has been connected in various capacities with the business of publishing school books in Boston and New York. On the organization of the American Book Company, in 1890, he was elected secretary of that organization. This company is the largest school book publishing concern in the world. It has its headquarters in New York city, with branches in many other cities. He has always kept up his interest in his native state, and owns the old homestead in Raymond, which he has enlarged and beautified and occupies as a summer residence. He is a member of many of the leading clubs in New York. He belongs to the Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, and to the Society of the Sons of the Colonial Wars. He is a member of Dartmouth Alumni Association of New York, and was for a number of years its president.

DESCENDANTS OF NATHAN KIMBALL.

Nathan Kimball is said by his grandson to have been born in Massachusetts, and to have gone to Jeffersonville, Indiana, where he died, leaving two sons, Nathan and Eleazer, who were in business together in Salem, Indiana. He had also daughters, one of whom married James Nesmith, who was probate judge of Park county, Indiana.

Nathaniel Kimball<sup>2</sup>, said to have been born in Massachusetts; married May 18, 1820, Nancy Furgeson, born 1801, died Jan. 26, 1825. He was a merchant and resided at Salem, Indiana. He died on board of a trading boat on the Mississippi river, Jan. 12, 1829, and was buried in the territory of Arkansas. He left a son, Nathan Kimball<sup>3</sup>.

Nathan Kimball<sup>3</sup> was born Nov. 22, 1823, at Fredericksburg, Ind.; married Sept. 23, 1845, Martha Ann McPheeters, born Livonia, Ind., June 9, 1828; died Livonia, Ind., April 14, 1850, daughter of James and Mary (Mitchell) McPheeters of Livonia, Ind.; married 2d, July 29, 1850, Emily C. McPheeters, born Livonia, Ind., Jan. 20, 1833, died Ogden, Utah, Nov. 25, 1892, daughter of John C. and Sarah (Orchard) McPheeters. He spent three years at the Asbury University, now DePauw University, at Greencastle, Ind., but was compelled to leave this place on account of lack of funds. In 1841, shortly after leaving college, he commenced teaching school at Independence, Mo., where he remained for a year and a half. He soon after this quit teaching and went to farming. In 1843 he commenced the study of medicine under Dr. Alexander McPheeters, and in 1845 he married the sister of his preceptor. He practised medicine until the war with Mexico, when he raised a company and was commissioned captain on June 14, 1846. He served until June 23, 1847, when his company was mustered out at New Orleans. He returned home and continued the practice of his profession until the spring of 1861. On April 17, 1861, he raised a company, and was commissioned captain on April 24th by Gov. Morton. He was assigned to duty in the Fourteenth Regt., Ind. Vols. When the regiment was organized, he was commissioned colonel. In this capacity he served under General Rosecrans at Rich Mountain, West Virginia. On the 12th of September, 1861, after a three and a half hours' engagement, he defeated a rebel attack at Cheat Mountain. In January, 1862, he was assigned to the command of the first brigade of the division, and on General Lander's death he assumed command of the division until relieved by General James Shields, on March 7, 1862. He was then sent with General Shields into the Shenandoah valley to operate with General Banks against Stonewall Jackson. In an engagement General Shields was severely wounded, and Colonel Kimball, being the senior colonel in the division, was put in command. In this position he succeeded in defeating the advance of Jackson's army and compelled him to retire. For his bravery in this battle he was commissioned brigadier-general. On the night of the 29th of May, 1862, he attacked the enemy at Front Royal, which place was captured after a hard fight. After General Shields was defeated at Fort Republick, General Kimball's brigade was ordered to report to General McClellan on James river, below Richmond. On July 2, 1862, he took part in the fight at Harrison's Landing. He drove the enemy from their position and occupied it himself. On the morning of the 4th he again repulsed the enemy. The next engagement in which he took an active part was Antietam. He next took part in the Battle of Fredericksburg. Here he was severely wounded in the thigh. On account of his wounds he received a leave of absence and remained at home until March, 1863, when he was ordered to join General Grant at Vicksburg. On July, 1863, he drove a division of the rebel army, under General Wert Adams, from their position after a fight lasting about thirty minutes. After the surrender of Vicksburg he was sent to

Arkansas to operate against General Price. He remained in Arkansas until sent with important despatches to Washington, D. C. After this he was ordered by the president to go to Arkansas and reorganize the state government. This he succeeded in doing early in 1864. In April, 1864, he was relieved of his command in Arkansas and ordered to report to General Sherman, commanding the Division of the Mississippi. Before his departure the senate and house of representatives of the state of Arkansas tendered him their thanks for his indefatigable labors in behalf of the loyal men of the state. On the 22d of the preceding February he was nominated by the republicans of Indiana for lieutenant-governor, with General Morton for governor, but he declined the offer, as he was actively engaged in the field. Leaving Arkansas he went to the Department of the Cumberland, where he was assigned to the Fourth Army Corps, under General O. O. Howard, and placed in command of the first brigade of the second division of that corps. Assuming command on the 22d of May, on the 27th he was engaged in the Battle of New Hope Church, Georgia. He was after this continually engaged in skirmishing until the 5th of June. His next engagement was at Jones's Creek, Georgia, on the 19th of June. He next took part in the famous Battle of Kenesaw Mountain. He was actively engaged in the operations which resulted in the capture of Atlanta. After the capture of Atlanta he was ordered to report to Gov. Morton for special duty, which duty was to subdue the Knights of the Golden Circle. This he succeeded in doing in about two months, without bloodshed. For this he received the special thanks of Gov. Morton. On November 26, 1864, he rejoined the army in front of Columbia, Tenn. On the morning of December 15, General Kimball led the attack on Nashville, and on the 11th of December he was ordered to attack the rebels who held a position behind their works on the Franklin pike. This he did successfully and captured their artillery and many prisoners. For his service in this battle he was brevetted major-general. He then made a campaign into eastern Tennessee. Returning to Nashville, he was mustered out of service, Sept. 25, 1865. On the 22d of February, 1866, he was nominated state treasurer of Indiana, a position to which he was afterwards elected. He was again elected to the same position in 1868. In 1872 he was an elector on the Grant ticket, and was elected the same year a member of the state legislature, and served on the committee on ways and means. In 1873 he was appointed by General Grant surveyor-general of Utah, in which office he served one term. He was appointed by President Hayes postmaster of Ogden, Utah, and was again appointed by President Harrison, in 1889, to the same position. He has taken a prominent part in the Grand Army of the Republic, and was commander of the Department of Indiana in 1866 and 1867. He now resides at Ogden, Utah.

THE KEMBLE OF BOSTON, MASS.

Among the early settlers of Boston, Mass., were three brothers whose names are spelled in a variety of ways on the records. They seem to have generally followed the spelling Kemble when they signed their names. Their names were Giles, Henry, and Thomas Kemble. The only record found of Giles is a deed given him by his brother, Thomas Kemble, discharging him of all demands. This is dated Feb. 6, 1657. Giles Kemble died Aug. 1, 1659, as is shown by the Boston records.

2 Henry Kemble<sup>2</sup>, married Nov. 13, 1656, Sarah Fonnell, born —, died Aug., 1657, daughter of John Fonnell; married 2d, Mary Brigden, born —, died July 4, 1696. He was an anchor smith. He was a man of considerable property for the times. His inventory amounted to £2,074,12s. He owned considerable land at Cape Porpoise, in York Co., Me., and had some in Boston, Mass.

CHILDREN.

- i. Zachariah<sup>3</sup>, b. Oct. 7, 1663. He was a shipwright. He appointed his mother, Mary Kemble, widow of Henry Kemble, his attorney, June 23, 1687.
- ii. Henry<sup>3</sup>, b. Feb. 25, 1665.
- iii. Giles<sup>3</sup>, b. July 14, 1668.
- iv. Abigail<sup>2</sup>, b. Oct. 13, 1669; m. Dec. 22, 1692, Philip Voden; m. 2d, Jan. 19, 1698, Isaac Jarvis. Abigail Jarvis, late Voden, testifies to her signature in October, 1702.
- 4 v. Timothy<sup>3</sup>, b. Aug. 29, 1672.
- vi. Mary<sup>3</sup>, m. William Hough.
- vii. Sarah<sup>3</sup>, m. Philip Bass.

3 Thomas Kemble<sup>2</sup>, born Jan. 14, 1622; died Jan. 29, 1688; married Elizabeth Trerice, born —, died Dec. 19, 1712. He lived in Charlestown and Boston, and was buried in Copp's Hill burying ground. He is called a merchant in the records. He seems to have moved to Boston after the birth of his children. He was living in Boston in 1682. He owned land on Cape Porpoise, in Wells, Me.

CHILDREN.

- i. John<sup>3</sup>, b. July 1, 1656. John Kemble, Cooper made his will in New York and left his property to Elizabeth Knight, daughter of Sarah and Richard Knight, reserving a life interest to his mother, Elizabeth Kemble, and sister, Sarah Knight.

Page 802. Add to Joseph Edward Kimball's record, d. at Brockton, Mass., Feb. 22, 1896. He enlisted May 1, 1861, in Co. B. of the First Mass. Vols.; was commissioned 2d Lt. in the 37th U. S. Colored Troops, Oct. 19, 1863, and afterwards 1st Lt. He was commissioned captain in the 116th U. S. Colored Troops, Sept. 29, 1864. As private and officer he took an active part in thirty-seven battles, including the First Bull Run, Yorktown, Williamsburg, Fair Oaks, Glendale, Malvern Hill, Bristoe Station, Groveton, Second Bull Run, Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, Gettysburg, New Market Heights, Petersburg, and Appomattox Court House. At New Market Heights he was breveted on the battle-field for gallantly leading his company with unbroken lines across an open field raked by the enemy's fire, and capturing at the bayonet's point a rebel redoubt. He received a bayonet wound in a charge at Williamsburg and a bullet wound at Gettysburg. On being mustered out at the close of the war he was honored with the words, "for faithful and meritorious services during the war." Returning home he carried on his business as a machinist in Abington, Milford, and Brockton. He had much literary taste and inventive genius and was as successful in the arts of peace as in those of war.

INDEX.

In this index only the names of those connected by birth or marriage with the Kimball family are given. Names mentioned incidentally in the text are not indexed.

The figures before the name show the date of birth or baptism. After the name, the page on which the name is to be found. A name occurring twice on the same page is only indexed once.

In case of two numbers after a name, the first shows the page on which the person's parents are found. The second gives the page of his own family.

The small figures after the name serve to indicate the generation to which the person belongs. They also serve, with few exceptions, to show that the person is descended from Richard or Henry Kimball.
